TIPS FOR EXHIBITORS

11 tips to make the most from your
expo experience

1: Use bright colours

Bright colours can set your exhibit's mood. They can make your brand instantly recognisable to visitors, and you can apply high-contrast colours to your design to accentuate certain display elements and highlight important messaging.

When choosing colours to make your trade show display stand out, a good rule of thumb is to start with 3 and follow the 60% - 30% - 10% design rule. What does that mean in practice?

- Apply your primary colour to 60% of your space. This colour will unify the various elements of your design.
- Apply your secondary colour to 30% of your space. This colour will create contrast and help you establish visual interest.
- Apply your accent colour to the last 10% of your design. This colour will help you emphasise important elements, graphics, and text.

When choosing which three colours to use, follow these tips:

- Consider the age, gender, and culture of your target audience. For example, most adults prefer cooler colours such as blue or green. Men specifically tend to be drawn to achromatic colours like black, white, and grey.
- Consider what the colours you choose signify. Different colours convey different feelings and emotions. While yellow exudes optimism and positivity, blue symbolises dependability and strength.
- Stay on brand. Don't choose trade show colours that differ from your brand colours and aesthetic. This can be confusing for your visitors.

2: Use empty space

Incorporate empty space into your trade show layout.

When designing your unique trade show display, you want to consider how to maximise your space to your advantage. However, this doesn't mean cluttering every inch of your exhibit with graphics, furniture, and displays.

Like with the content on your website, whitespace is vital. It helps balance your exhibit, create a more visually appealing display, and draw your visitors' attention to your most important messages.

That's why it's important to think hard about the proportions of your booth. A good rule of thumb is to ensure about 40% of your booth is empty space.

3: One clear theme

Weave one clear theme throughout all your messaging.

Many exhibitors will be tempted to highlight all of their product's features, resulting in confusing and conflicting messages for prospects.

Set yourself apart by highlighting your unique selling proposition (USP). Your USP is the one thing that makes your brand unique. It's the one thing you can do better than all of your competitors. To establish a USP ask yourself the following questions:

- What problem does your product solve?
- How do you solve that problem better than anyone else?
- What makes your product unique?

Then make sure all your most important graphics and visuals communicate this message.

4: Tell your story

Tell your brand's unique story.

One way to stand out at a trade show is to successfully tell your brand's story. Almost every booth you see will feature a large header, company logo, and branded graphics, but many will fail at explaining their story in a compelling manner that incites prospects to take action.

Customers will never buy from you unless they feel they can trust you. And they'll never feel they can trust you until they get to know you.

So dig into your company story. Ask yourself:

- Why did our founder create our company in the first place?
- What problem did he or she aim to solve?
- Why should customers trust us
- What expertise or authority do we contribute to our industry

- Why do we do what we do?
- What drives our work?
- Why should our customers choose our product or service over a competitor's?

Once you have your "why," brainstorm unique ways to conceptualise this idea within your site. Consider how you can incorporate your story into your layouts, graphics, messaging, brochures, and design.

5: Display products

Incorporate your own products into your display in an original way.

If you're like 88% of trade show exhibitors, you participate in trade shows to raise awareness of your company and products. One of the best ways to do this is to incorporate your own products into your display. In doing so, you can also ensure that no one else will have a booth quite like yours!

6: Lighting tips

Use various types of trade show exhibit lighting to illuminate your display.

There are endless ways to use lighting to make your exhibit more exciting and unique.

The right lighting can be subtle or show-stopping. It can make your booth more appealing by showcasing the intricate detail you poured into your display. It can also enhance the visibility of your products and graphics and underscore important messaging. Here are a few different types of lights to consider:

- Spotlights – You can use spotlights in various colours to create a dramatic effect while highlighting a particular product, like a bestseller. Spotlights can be incandescent, fluorescent, or halogen.

- Strobe Lights and Gobo Lights – Strobe lights and gobo lights can help you create interesting visual effects. You can use them to project your company name, logo, or slogan onto your booth floor or wall.
- Hanging Lights – Hanging lights will illuminate your booth while attracting the attention of passersby.
- Accent Lighting – Use accent lighting to add texture to your graphics.
- Ambient Lighting – Add dimension to your display with ambient lighting. Lamps, for example, can help you create your desired mood or set a specific ambiance.

7: A space to meet

Design your meeting area to reflect your brand's image and stimulate lively conversation.

When it comes to designing your booth's meeting area, you have plenty of unique options for furniture. A few fun choices include:

- Portable counters, tables, and display cases
- Illuminated LED furniture
- Inflatable furniture (you can even have it printed with your company name and logo!)

It's important to use furniture sparingly and design a space that is unique to your product, service, and aesthetic.

8: Demonstrate it

Host an interactive product demonstration.

Lots of trade show exhibitors incorporate demos into their exhibits, but many fail to include an “it” factor that will draw—and keep—their visitors’ attention. Your job as an exhibitor is to create a trade show display that sets your booth apart from your competitors’. The more people who stop to view your demonstration, the more chances you have to convert interested prospects into leads. Remember that exhibits lose their impact when they’re all tell and no show. Visitors want to be engaged. They want to interact with you and your product.

9: Make it interactive

Draw attention to your booth with unique interactive activities.

Interactive touchscreens, games, and activities are a great way to add a unique dimension to your trade show exhibit. They can help you draw attendees to your booth and kickstart the interaction between you and your prospects. Once you open the door for that initial conversation, you can start learning about your audience (and maybe collect their contact information, too!). Here are a few other ideas for interactive booth technology and activities:

- Surveys and quizzes
- Educational seminars
- Interactive video walls
- Carnival-style games or trivia
- Scavenger hunt
- Photo booth
- Virtual reality

Make sure you follow these best practices for successfully incorporating interactive games and technology into your exhibit:

- Ensure all activities are consistent with your brand.
- Ensure all activities will help you achieve your trade show goals
- Add a unique spin that could only come from you.
- Reward visitors for the time they spend at your booth.

10: Prizes & promos

Think outside the box when it comes to promotional items and giveaway prizes.

It's easy to mass produce items like lanyards and pens that showcase your company name and logo, but you can set yourself apart by handing out promotional items and offering giveaway prizes that your prospects actually want. If your promo items and prizes are useful, your leads will use them frequently. They'll see your brand name and logo often, and they may even tell others about you. So don't simply choose the cheapest item you can produce in large quantities.

Make sure your promo items and prizes are high quality. They shouldn't look or feel cheap or break easily.

Make sure there's a clear connection from the items to your product or service.

Lastly, make sure they maintain your brand's image and beliefs. For example, if your company is all about reducing waste, don't hand out water bottles that are unnecessarily wrapped in plastic

11: Get attention

Grab attendees' attention with one-of-a-kind displays and creative stunts.

When you create a custom exhibit, you can design a truly unique display that entices attendees to stop and visit and leaves a lasting impression.

So don't limit yourself to what you've seen before. Don't be afraid to think outside the box and try something new. You'll be glad you did.
